Bed sheets have been used for centuries. The word sheet, meaning length of cloth, is attested by the mid-13th century as a "large square or rectangular piece of linen or cotton spread over a bed" Fitted sheets are a much more recent innovation. In the 1950's African American Bertha Berman filed a patent application for a fitted sheet that used elastic on the corners to help keep it in position. Further innovation came later when Gisele Jubinville, of Alberta, Canada, created a fitted sheet with deep mitred edges, which acted like a pocket for the mattress corners and that had elastic sides. She was granted a patent in the early 1990's and shortly after sold it for $1 million. For Switzerland...
