Gross motor skill These gross movements come from large muscle groups and whole body movement. At first they Gross motor skills are the abilities usually acquired during childhood as part of a child's motor learning. These skills are built upon, improved and better controlled throughout early childhood, and continue in refinement throughout most of the individual's years of development into adulthood. "Tummy-time" is a good example of this. By the time they reach two years of age, almost all children are able to stand up, walk and run, walk up stairs, etc. The children will typically learn head control, trunk stability, and then standing up and walking. These skills develop in a head-to-toe order. strengthen better. It is shown that children exposed to outdoor play time activities will develop better gross motor skills. They need space and time to explore in their environment and use their muscles 941099d22c
