Like previous Pokémon games, Diamond and Pearl chronicle the adventures of a young Pokémon Trainer as they train and battle Pokémon while also thwarting the schemes of a criminal organization called Team Galactic. The games added many new features, such as Internet play over the Nintendo Wi-Fi Connection, changes to battle mechanics and Pokémon Contests, along with the addition of 107 new Pokémon. The games are independent of each other but feature largely the same plot, and while both can be played separately... Due to the Pokémon franchise experiencing a rise in popularity at the time of Uranium's release, the game was downloaded 1.5 million times within its first week, becoming highly popular with the Pokémon fan community. Soon after its release, the game received a DMCA takedown request from Nintendo, one of the Pokémon franchise's parent companies, which resulted in all download links to the game being removed. Though development continued behind the scenes following the takedown, development was eventually entirely halted by September 2016. Upon its release, Pokémon Go received "mixed" or "average" reviews; critics found the experience enjoyable, but noted several technical issues. Despite this, it became one of the most popular and profitable mobile apps of 2016, amassing over 500 million downloads worldwide. The game is credited with popularizing location-based and AR technology, encouraging physical activity and social interaction. However, it has also faced criticism for causing accidents and public disturbances. Some governments raised security concerns and imposed regulations on its use.
