== Charts == 2a6ef36b01 == Synopsis == 2a6ef36b01 Research has shown two bases for love at first sight. One is that the attractiveness of a person can be very quickly determined, with the average time in one study being 0.13 seconds. The other is that the first few minutes, but not the first moment, of a relationship have been shown to be predictive of the relationship's future success, more so than what two people have in common or whether they like each other ("like attracts like"). 2a6ef36b01 == Critical reception == 2a6ef36b01
