Education in Ontario The province's public education system is primarily funded by the Government of Ontario, with education in Canada falling almost entirely under provincial jurisdiction. The school systems Education in Ontario comprises public and private elementary schools, secondary schools and post-secondary institutions. Schools for Indigenous peoples in Canada with Indian status are the only schools that are funded federally, and although the schools receive more money per individual student than certain provinces, the amount also includes the operation and maintenance of school facilities, instructional services, students supports and staff. There is no federal government department or agency involved in the formation or analysis of policy regarding education for most Canadians. Most provincial allocations per students do not include the maintenance and operation of buildings, as most provincial governments offer additional grants. The current respective Ministers for each are Jill Dunlop and Nolan Quinn. school systems provide elementary and secondary schooling to Canadian residents of the province from Junior Kindergarten to Grade 12. Publicly funded elementary and secondary schools are administered by the Ontario Ministry of Education, while colleges and universities are administered by the Ontario Ministry of Training, Colleges and Universities 5ecff49c0f

Whole language approaches to reading instruction are typically contrasted with the far more effective phonics-based methods of teaching reading and writing. Phonics-based methods emphasize instruction for decoding and spelling. Whole language practitioners disagree with that view, instead focusing on teaching meaning and making students read more. The scientific consensus is that whole language-based methods of reading instruction... In the 1990s, a movement began in the U.S. to establish national educational standards for students across the country.

Whole language The method became a major model for education in the United States, Canada, New Zealand, and the United Kingdom in the 1980s and 1990s, despite there being no scientific support for the method's effectiveness. Some versions of this Whole language is a discredited philosophy of reading and an educational method originally developed for teaching literacy in English to young children. However, researchers such as Reid Lyon say that "reading is not a natural process", and many students, when learning to read, require direct instruction in alphabetic coding, phonemic awareness, phonics, spelling, and comprehension. otherwise) include silent reading time, sometimes called DEAR ("Drop Everything And Read") time or SSR (sustained silent reading). It is based on the premise that learning to read English comes naturally to humans, especially young children, in the same way that learning to speak develops naturally
