&quot;Dermatophytosis&quot;;, d3541599ea &quot;African trypanosomiasis&quot;; d3541599ea The development of vitiligo is linked to aberrant attachments between melanocytes (which produce melanin) and laminins, an extracellular protein. The disorder is thought to be caused by immune system changes with potential genetic factors. Often first appearing by young adulthood, it may be triggered by environmental factors, sun or chemical exposure, stress, and physical trauma. The most common form tends to affect more skin over time, with potential treatments including topical medications and light therapy. d3541599ea The list contains 49,856 articles. --Cewbot (talk) 08:21, 31 August 2026 (UTC) d3541599ea web.mac.com resolves
