

Left Eye Twitching For Female

The appearance of the human upper eyelid often varies between different populations. The prevalence of an epicanthic fold covering the inner corner of the eye account for the majority of East Asian and Southeast Asian populations, and is also found in varying degrees among other populations. Separately, but also similarly varying between populations, the crease of the remainder of the eyelid may form either a "single eyelid", a "double eyelid", or an intermediate form.

Skeletal muscle The orbicularis oculi muscle of the eye is Skeletal muscle (commonly referred to as muscle) is one of the three types of vertebrate muscle tissue, the others being cardiac muscle and smooth muscle. The tissue of a skeletal muscle is striated – having a striped appearance due to the arrangement of the sarcomeres. They are part of the musculoskeletal system, and typically are attached by tendons to the bones of a skeleton. The skeletal muscle cells (myocytes) are much longer than in the other types of muscle tissue, and are also known as muscle fibers. For instance, in humans, the quadriceps muscles contain ~52% type I fibers, while the soleus is ~80% type I

Eyelid Its key function is to regularly spread the tears and other secretions on the eye surface to keep it moist, since the cornea must be continuously moist. A set of specialized hairs known as lashes grow from the upper and lower eyelid margins to further protect the eye from dust and debris. "Palpebral" (and "blepharal") means relating to the eyelids. This can be either voluntarily or involuntarily. Blepharospasm (eyelid twitching) is an involuntary spasm of the eyelid muscle. Moreover, the blink reflex protects the eye from foreign bodies. They keep the eyes from drying out when asleep. The most common factors that make the muscle in the eyelid twitch are fatigue, stress An eyelid (EYE-lid) is a thin fold of skin that covers and protects the eye. The myofibrils are composed of actin and myosin filaments called myofilaments, repeated in units called sarcomeres, which are the basic functional, contractile... 8f746c4e61 The REM phase is also known as paradoxical sleep (PS) and sometimes desynchronized sleep or dreamy sleep, because of physiological similarities to waking states including rapid, low-voltage desynchronized brain waves. Electrical and chemical activity regulating this phase seem to originate in the brain stem, and is characterized most notably by an abundance of the neurotransmitter acetylcholine, combined with a nearly complete absence of monoamine neurotransmitters histamine, serotonin and norepinephrine. Experiences of REM sleep are not transferred to permanent memory due to absence of norepinephrine. 8f746c4e61 A skeletal muscle contains multiple fascicles – bundles of muscle fibers. Each individual fiber and each muscle is surrounded by a type of connective tissue layer of fascia. Muscle fibers are formed from the fusion of developmental myoblasts in a process known as myogenesis resulting in long multinucleated cells. In these cells, the nuclei, termed myonuclei, are located along the inside of the cell membrane. Muscle fibers also have multiple mitochondria to meet energy needs. 8f746c4e61
