

What Do Kys Mean In Text

== Mutual intelligibility == 750efe7f10 I just created the article Sachiko Kiyono and it contains a translation from her Japanese article. However, I forgot to put that in my edit summary. Even though I put a notice on the talk page I know I made a mistake. What should I do? (Also, how do I connect her new English article to her Japanese article in the language tab up top?) I would appreciate any help. theomached (talk) 23:04, 20 July 2023 (UTC) 750efe7f10

Manisa The city forms the urban part of the districts Şehzadeler and Yunusemre, with a population of 385,452 in 2022. Snowfall, while fairly uncommon, does accumulate Manisa (Turkish pronunciation: [ma'nisa]) is a city in Turkey's Aegean Region and the administrative seat of Manisa Province, lying approximately 40 km northeast of the major city of İzmir. Summers in Manisa are hotter than its western neighbour İzmir, while winters are colder due to its inland location 750efe7f10

The date of foundation of Ephesus is back in the bronze age under the Hittite state of Arzawa. During that time it came into contact with the Achaeans. At some point after the fall of Arzawa it was invested by the Ionians. No doubt Ionian Ephesus was founded on the coast of the Aegean, like all the other Ionian cities. Since then the Küçük Menderes River, at the mouth of which it was placed, prograded to such an extent in parallel to the progradation of the Büyük Menderes River that Ephesus was left inland, like Priene and Myus on the other side of Mycale. Ionian ascendancy then passed to the Ionian... 750efe7f10 There is a high degree of mutual intelligibility between the two languages, particularly in written form. Research suggests that mutual intelligibility between Dutch and Afrikaans is better than between Dutch and Frisian or between Danish and Swedish. Mutual intelligibility tends to be asymmetrical, as it is easier for Dutch speakers to understand Afrikaans than for Afrikaans speakers to understand Dutch. 750efe7f10 According to the Greek geographer Strabo in his book Geographica, the eponym of the city is, according to a founding myth, an Argonaut who founded the city after returning from Colchis, at the place where the nymphs took away Hylas. 750efe7f10 aura 750efe7f10 == History == 750efe7f10 ===== File:Selection Birkenau ramp.jpg ===== 750efe7f10

İzmir's proximity also adds a particular dimension to all aspects of life's pace in Manisa in the form of a dense traffic of daily commuters between the two cities, separated as they are by a half-hour drive served by a fine six-lane highway nevertheless requiring attention at all times due to its curves and the rapid ascent (sea level to more than 500 meters at Sabuncubeli Pass) across Mount Sipylus's mythic scenery. 750efe7f10

Cius they may be the Hylas and Cius of Pliny; but the plural ἐκβολαί does not necessarily mean more than a single mouth; and Pliny certainly says that the Ascanius Cius (; Ancient Greek: Κίος or Κῖος Kios; Currently Gemlik, Turkey) was an Ancient Greek city bordering the Propontis (now known as the Sea of Marmara), in Bithynia and in Mysia (in modern northwestern Turkey). The city was later renamed to Prusias after King Prusias I of Bithynia, who once restored the city 750efe7f10

The specific attribution to the little understood Pelasgians Larissa (Ancient Greek: Λάρισσα, romanized: Larissa), was an ancient Greek city in the south-west of the Troad region of Anatolia. It has been located on a small rise by the coast now known as Limantepe, about 3. Larisa in the Troad should not be confused with 'Aeolian' Larissa, near Menemen, or with 'Ionian' Larissa in İzmir province. As with other Greek toponyms containing the consonantal string -ss-, spellings that drop one 's' exist alongside those that retain both in the ancient literary sources. 5 km from the village of Kösedere to the north-east and 3 km from the village of Babadere to the east, in the Ayvacık district of Çanakkale province, Turkey.
