

Tactical Voting Local Elections 2025

The elections in England saw significant losses for the governing Conservative Party, which lost over 1,000 council seats. The Labour Party, the Liberal Democrats and the Green Party of England and Wales all made gains, with Labour becoming the party with most members elected to local government for the first time since 2002. The Greens won majority control of Mid Suffolk District Council, the party's first ever council majority.

Strategic voting However, weaker guarantees can be shown under stronger conditions. e. one that always maximizes a voter's satisfaction with the result, regardless of other voters' ballots. This implies all voting systems can sometimes encourage voters to strategize. Examples include one-dimensional preferences (where the median rule is strategyproof). or tactical voting is voting in consideration of possible ballots cast by other voters in order to maximize one's satisfaction with the election's results Strategic or tactical voting is voting in consideration of possible ballots cast by other voters in order to maximize one's satisfaction with the election's results. Gibbard's theorem shows that no voting system has a single "always-best" strategy, i b053bb44f8

The term plurality at-large is in common usage in elections for representative members of a body who are elected or appointed to represent the whole membership of the body (for example, a city, state or province, nation or country, club or association). (The plurality at-large election system is common in cities. The Senate of the Philippines is elected by the rare country-wide use of block voting.) Where the system is used in a territory divided into multi-member electoral districts, the system is commonly referred to as "block voting" or the "bloc vote". These systems are usually based on a single round of voting. b053bb44f8
