Neuropathic pain may be associated with abnormal sensations called dysesthesia (including paresthesia and hypoesthesia) from normally non-painful stimuli (allodynia). It may have continuous and/or episodic (paroxysmal) components. Common qualities include burning or coldness, "pins and needles" sensations, numbness and itching. The latter resemble stabbings or electric shocks e1e3125084

Erythromelalgia needed] Some suffering with EM are prescribed ketamine topical creams as a way of managing pain on a long-term basis. There is severe burning pain (in the small fiber sensory nerves) and skin redness. Primary erythromelalgia is caused by mutation of the voltage-gated sodium channel α -subunit gene SCN9A. Erythromelalgia may occur either as a primary or secondary disorder (i. e. a disorder in and of itself or a symptom of another condition). Secondary erythromelalgia can result from small fiber peripheral neuropathy of any cause, polycythemia vera, essential thrombocythemia, hypercholesterolemia, mushroom or mercury poisoning, and some autoimmune disorders. Feedback from some EM patients has led Erythromelalgia, or Mitchell's disease (after Silas Weir Mitchell), is a rare vascular peripheral pain disorder in which blood vessels, usually in the lower extremities or hands, are episodically blocked (frequently on and off daily),
