User in question is user:FergusM1970. User has been repeatedly editing this article towards a Pro - ecig view. I do not believe they are capable of editing the article neutrally because they have strong opinions about the topic and seem to have chronically failed to get the point about sourcing guidelines for medical content, NPOV, OR, edit warring, etc. Every single one of the edits have been in favor of e-cigs, or original research alteration/deletion of content was against e-cigs. I do not believe they are here to write an encyclopedia but rather twist the article into their own designs. Lesion 18:22, 19 April 2014 (UTC) 5e75547ad5

We are having trouble reasoning with this user. He is editing disruptively in a couple of articles. Currently that means he is adding interwiki links where it has been decided that these are not helpful and we should instead be using . This user has been edit-warring in List of people declared venerable by Pope Francis and List of people beatified by Pope Francis and has refused to discuss. In fact this user has never, in 700 edits, ever used a Talk page or an edit summary. His talk page is littered with dablink notifications and warnings, including me asking him to use an edit summary and warning him about adding unsourced material to another Pope Francis article. Due to edits like this I believe he has begun to edit logged-out, perhaps because he's on his mobile phone, but it has the additional effect of avoiding scrutiny. 72.209.251.187 (talk · contribs · deleted contribs · filter log · WHOIS · RDNS · RBLs · http · block user · block log) has an active editing history since September up to two hours ago.
