Valentine began writing the play after watching an ABC Television programme (Stateline) in 2003, which documented the experiences of three Indigenous women - Marjorie, Coral, and Marlene - who had been incarcerated at the Girls Home. She immediately sought to interview these women. In the weeks following, Stateline broadcast more episodes on non-Indigenous women's experiences in the home, which prompted Valentine to construct the script."I thought that this was a story that needed to be understood in more detail than 15 minutes on a current affairs programme would allow. [...] It immediately struck me as the voices of people who had not been heard on the Australian mainstage. It immediately struck me that surviving such an institution must involve an incredible story of triumph and courage. These were women with guts, attitude and humour and they were crying out to have their story heard." - Alana Valentine (2007)The play was first performed by... 6ebf1dfef1 Matt Stifler, the younger brother of Steve Stifler, is eager to enter a family business of making pornographic films to prove his "Stifmeister" behavior to his older brother, Steve. 6ebf1dfef1
