Wood glue Traditionally animal proteins like casein from milk or collagen from animal hides and bones were boiled down to make early glues. Many substances have been used as glues. Examples of modern wood glues include polyvinyl acetate (PVA) and epoxy resins. Later, glues were made from plant starches like flour or potato starch. Some resins (i. When combined with water and heated, the starch gelatinizes and forms a sticky paste as it dries. Many substances have been used as glues. As of 2021, "the wood panel industry uses almost 95% of synthetic petroleum-derived thermosetting adhesives, mainly based on urea, phenol, and melamine, among others". Throughout the 16th century, scientific culture flourished in many different areas of study, not only in academies and courts but also in a number of books. There was a new excitement for manipulating nature and acquiring secrets for a wide range of uses, including cosmetics, alchemical transformations and medical remedies. In early modern contexts, the words "secret" and "experiment" were synonymous. However, it did not mean that it was unknown; rather, that the "secret" or the "experiment" had been proven to work. In the 16th century, a secret was a form of currency.
