The fighting machines are described as having three tall, articulated legs which spurt green gas from their joints, with a grouping of long, whip-like metallic tentacles hanging beneath the silver central body, atop the main body a brass coloured hood-like head houses a sole Martian operator.. The wheel is apparently unknown to the Martians, who use electromagnetic artificial muscles instead. In chapter 10, Wells' narrator first describes the appearance and movement of the machines; This film should not be confused with The Stool Pigeon (also 1915) which was directed by Paul Powell. In cats, the use of deracoxib is not recommended.

Fighting machine (The War of the Worlds) of glittering metal... imagine a milking stool tilted and bowled violently along the ground... But instead of a milking stool imagine it a great body of machinery The fighting machine (also known as a "Martian Tripod") is one of the fictional machines used by the Martians in H. In the novel, it is a fast-moving three-legged walking vehicle reported to be 100 feet (30 meters) tall with multiple, whip-like tentacles used for grasping, and two lethal weapons: a heat-ray and a gun-like tube used for discharging canisters of a poisonous chemical black smoke. G. Wells' 1898 classic science fiction novel The War of the Worlds. It is the primary machine the Martians use when they invade Earth, along with the handling machine, the flying machine, and the embankment machine

Portable toilet The portable toilet is used in a variety of situations, for example in urban slums of developing countries, at festivals, for camping, on boats, on construction sites, and at film locations and large outdoor gatherings where there are no other facilities. Early A portable or mobile toilet (colloquial terms: thunderbox, porta-john, porta-potty or porta-loo) is any type of toilet that can be moved around, some by one person, some by mechanical equipment such as a truck and crane. Most portable toilets are unisex single units with privacy ensured by a simple lock on the door. Some portable toilets are small molded plastic or fiberglass portable rooms with a lockable door and a receptacle to catch the human excreta in a container. Most types do not require any pre-existing services or infrastructure, such as sewerage, and are completely self-contained. The velvet upholstered close stool used by William III is on display at Hampton Court Palace; see Groom of the Stool. Site in Old Montreal, Canada

Deracoxib is used in dogs for the control of pain and inflammation associated with osteoarthritis and for the prevention of pain following orthopedic surgery or dental procedures. A portable toilet is not connected to a hole in the ground (like a pit latrine), nor to a septic tank, nor is it plumbed into a municipal system leading to a sewage treatment plant. The chemical toilet is probably the most well-known type of portable toilet, but other types also exist, such as urine-diversion dehydration toilets, composting toilets... == Plot == Medical uses == Side effects include the following: The Stool Pigeon was Chaney's debut as a movie director.
