Morestin was born at Basse-Pointe, a commune in the French overseas department of Martinique. His family were Béké (white creoles). His father Charles Amédée Morestin (d. 1902) was a prominent doctor who influenced both Hippolyte and his younger brother Amédée to study medicine, sending Morestin and his older brother to Paris to study at Lycée Louis-le-Grand when Morestin was 14. Both Hippolyte and Amédée dedicated their doctoral theses, defended in Paris in 1894 and 1912, respectively, to their father, and the work of Amédée used observations by Hippolyte.
