The ICVP's nickname Yellow Card or its French equivalent Carte Jaune derives from the yellow colour of the document. The fact that yellow fever is a commonly required vaccination for travel has contributed to the document's association with the colour yellow, even though the ICVP can cover a wide range of vaccinations and booster shots, not just yellow fever. 02b14e5e14 After receiving initial success upon release, the song saw renewed popularity after being featured in the 1999 film Fight Club. It has become the band's signature song and has inspired a multitude of covers while several arrangements of the song have been used in various film, television, and video game soundtracks. Birth tourism In an effort to discourage birth tourism, Ireland restricted citizenship by birth to those where at least one parent is a citizen of the country, by passing Birth tourism is the practice of traveling to another country or city for the purpose of giving birth in that country. Other reasons for birth tourism other than future sponsorship for the parents include the ability to enroll the child in the host country's public schooling system, access to better healthcare for the birth parent or child, and to hedge against corruption and political instability in the parents' home country. Popular destinations include the United States and Canada. Such a child is sometimes called an "anchor baby" if their citizenship is intended to help their parents obtain permanent residency in the country. The main reason for birth tourism is to obtain citizenship for the child in a country with birthright citizenship (jus soli). Another target for birth tourism is Hong Kong, where some mainland Chinese residents travel to give birth to gain right of abode for their children 02b14e5e14

Bolan claimed to have written the song out of his desire to record Chuck Berry's "Little Queenie", and said that the riff was taken from the Berry tune. In fact, a slightly edited line (And meanwhile, I'm still thinking) from "Little Queenie" is delivered during the fade of "Get It On". According to producer Tony Visconti, this line was an unscripted ad-lib by Bolan during recording.
