Cat communication They rarely meow to communicate with fellow cats or other animals. Cats can socialize with each other and are known to form "social ladders", where a dominant cat leads a few lesser cats. When cats communicate with humans, they do so to get what they need or want, such as food, water, attention, or play. could also lead to the dominant cat preventing subordinate cats from eating and using the litter box. As such, cat communication methods have been significantly altered by domestication. This is common in multi-cat households. Studies have shown that domestic cats tend to meow much more than feral cats. Additionally, they collaborate, play, and share resources. This can cause the subordinate cat to defecate somewhere Cats communicate for a variety of reasons, including to show happiness, express anger, solicit attention, and observe potential prey 17a95a4891
