Haggis pakora has been described as a "highly improbable Indo-Caledonian alliance making use of the Scots' most potent culinary weapons: sheep pluck (heart, liver and lungs) and deep-fat frying." It has more fondly been called "an inspired example of Indo-Gael fusion". Haggis pakoras are just one of the many haggis fusion foods that have arisen in recent years. Others include haggis samosas, haggis spring rolls, haggis lasagna and haggis quesadillas. Often these use vegetarian haggis rather than the traditional haggis made from a sheep's stomach stuffed with the chopped up lung, heart and liver of the sheep mixed with oatmeal. Strained yogurt is usually marketed in North America as "Greek yogurt". In the United Kingdom, the term "Greek yoghurt" may only be used for yoghurt imported from Greece; strained yoghurt is sold as "Greek-style yoghurt", and yoghurt made creamy by thickening agents instead may also use this name, although ingredients must be declared. Strained yogurt is widely eaten in

Balkan, Middle Eastern, Central Asian, and South Asian cuisines, where it is often used in cooking, as it curdles less readily when cooked. It is used in a variety of dishes, cooked or not, savory or sweet. Straining makes even non-fat yogurt varieties thicker, richer, and creamier than unstrained. Since straining removes the whey, more milk is required to make strained yogurt, increasing the production cost... 5bf714ef51 == Company history == 5bf714ef51
