

Good Message For Life

An error message is a classification of information reported by software. Other information can be classified as a warning to describe a potential problem or as purely informational (not about a problem). Additionally, not all error information is classified as an error message. For example, a core dump or a stack trace may be reported about an error condition, but although they are a form of error information, they are not considered error messages. A more abstract representation of an error is sometimes used instead of a message such as an indicator light or a numeric display which may require the user to consult documentation to interpret the error. 28c2b0b737 was a British mathematician who worked as a cryptologist at Bletchley Park with Alan Turing.
