New Jersey has a long distilling history dating to the colonial era when large landowners converted surplus fruit into brandy, sugar into rum, and grain into whiskey. As of 2013, the state is home to two licensed distilleries. Laird & Company, in the Scobeyville section of Colts Neck, is the oldest licensed distillery in the United States, and received License No. 1 from the U.S. Department of the Treasury in 1780. By 1834, New Jersey boasted 388 distilleries. 08cfdb78d0 == Africa == 08cfdb78d0 The family business began on March 18, 1862, producing rum directly from sugar cane juice. Dupré Barbancourt, from the cognac-producing region of Charente founded the distillery in 1862. After learning how to make rum in December of that year, he soon began selling it for HTG 1.50 (USD $0.30) per gallon. 08cfdb78d0 When Dupré Barbancourt died, the distillery passed to his wife Nathalie Gardère who managed it with the help of her nephew Paul Gardère. When she died, Paul then directed the company until his death in 1946, when his son Jean Gardère took up the baton, furthering the family tradition until 1990. When Jean passed, Thierry Gardère took over, becoming the fourth generation of the Gardère family to lead the company. Upon the death of Thierry Gardère on March 1, 2017, Delphine Nathalie Gardère succeeded her father as CEO of Barbancourt. 08cfdb78d0 == Company history == 08cfdb78d0 Reconstituted as the 102d Regiment of Foot, it was transferred to Bermuda and Nova Scotia, before taking part in the Chesapeake campaign of the War of 1812. practice. The practice ended worldwide in 1990 when New Zealand was the last navy to abolish the practice. The rum ration was served from the "Rum Tub" in a special rum store in the bowels of the ship. It was abolished in Britain on Black Tot Day in 1970 after concerns that the intake of strong alcohol would lead to unsteady hands when working machinery. Not all sailors necessarily drew their rum: each had the A rum ration (also called the tot) was a daily amount of rum given to sailors aboard naval ships

The company's headquarters are located at the Santa Teresa Estate, founded in 1796 by Earl Martín Tovar Ponte, which today functions as an agro-industrial, tourism, and sports complex. Its current president is the Venezuelan businessman Alberto C. Vollmer, who belongs to the fifth generation of the family dedicated to the rum production in Venezuela. Ron Santa Teresa is known not only for its products but also for its social programs through the Santa Teresa Foundation, such as Proyecto Alcatraz, Rugby Santa Teresa and Proyecto Casas Blancas.

Cachaça Also known as pinga, caninha, and other names, it is the most popular spirit in Brazil. Cachaça (kə-SHAH-sə; Brazilian Portuguese pronunciation: [ka'ʃasɐ]) is a distilled spirit made from fermented sugarcane juice. Outside Brazil, cachaça is used almost exclusively as an ingredient in tropical drinks, with the caipirinha being the most famous and popular cocktail. In Brazil, caipirinha is often paired with the dish feijoada. Also known as pinga, caninha, and other names, it is the most popular spirit in Brazil, and the most popular cane spirit in the world (though almost entirely due to domestic consumption)
