He won a state scholarship to university at 14 but dropped out after two years to work as an office clerk in Adelaide. Prior to the outbreak of World War II, he joined the Australian army. Seeing the last evacuation boat leave the island, he was captured by the Germans during the Battle of Crete and along with other prisoners, was force-marched through Italy, Austria and Germany, and sent to a prisoner of war camp. At one stage his mother Mabel received the news that two out of her three sons were listed as missing in action. It was in Stalag VII that he began to take an interest in writing. He once said: "My first year as a prisoner-of-war was the most interesting in my life. The ensuing three were the most boring - but more instructive I think, than any university. I learned several languages: German from a Serbian horse-doctor; Spanish from a... 21bfbba634 == Etymology == 21bfbba634
