scholarship to attend life drawing classes at the Círculo de Bellas Artes. He also attended the School of Arts and Crafts. His teachers were Aniceto Marinas and José Capuz. In 1927 he won the first prize for sculpture at the Casino's annual exhibition with his portrait of La Jeroma. The sculptor Mariano Benlliure, a member of the jury, paid for the bronze reproduction. He studied at the San Fernando School of Fine Arts between 1931 and 1934. After that he moved to Ávila, where he became a teacher at the School of Arts and Crafts. His two years in Ávila introduced him to Castilian realist sculpture and stonework, as can be seen in his Mujer abulense and Añoranza, for which he won the third medal at the 1934 National Fine Arts Exhibition. b840d5bf50
