Fly fishing with the invention of the multiplying winch, although he was certainly the first to advertise its sale. Early multiplying reels were wide and had a small Fly fishing is an angling technique that uses an ultra-lightweight fishing lure called an artificial fly, which typically mimics small invertebrates such as flying and aquatic insects to attract and catch insectivorous fish. It is also very common for fly anglers to wear waders, carry a hand net, and stand in the water when fishing. Because the sectional density of a fly lure is insufficient to overcome air resistance (as its mass is very small, but its sectional and wetted area are often quite significant due to the fluffy exterior), it cannot be cast far using conventional gears and techniques. Such lures are typically made by tying various filamentous materials (feathers, hairs/fur, synthetic fibers or yarns) to the shank of a small fish hook, creating tufts/bundles of protruding bristles that imitate setae, wing venations and other appendages aesthetically. Casting of fly lures is done using specialized tackles, which typically involve the use of heavy-ended fly lines, and the casting techniques are significantly different from other forms of angling 8cfe1e51d8

List of eponymous laws Stated by Herb Grosch in 1965. In others, the work or publications of the individual have led to the law being so named – as is the case with Moore's law. There are also laws ascribed to individuals by others, such as Murphy's law; or given eponymous names despite the absence of the named person. Grotthuss-Draper This list of eponymous laws provides links to articles on laws, principles, adages, and other succinct observations or predictions named after a person. root of the increase in speed; that is, to do a calculation 10 times as cheaply you must do it 100 times as fast. In some cases the person named has coined the law – such as Parkinson's law. Named laws range from significant scientific laws such as Newton's laws of motion, to humorous examples such as Murphy's law 8cfe1e51d8
