Cantung Mine Production was suspended from October 2009 to October 2010. The mine owner, North American Tungsten Corporation, went bankrupt in 2015 and the mine closed in October of that year. As of December, 2017, the mine remained closed, with the possibility of being opened to process a nearby lithium deposit. Tungsten was originally discovered in the area in 1954 by prospectors. The federal government of Canada now owns the mine and has to clean up the site. Cantung Mine operated from 1962 to 1986, again from 2002 to 2003, and from 2005. Thacker Pass lithium mine In late January 2023, car giant General Motors announced it would invest $650M in the mine project, giving GM exclusive access to the first phase of production.

Construction began in March 2023 after an emergency appeal was denied by the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals. The project site would cover 18,000 acres (7,300 ha), with less than 6,000 acres (2,400 ha) of that being mined, on a site 21 miles (34 km) west-northwest of Orovada, Nevada within the McDermitt Caldera. There has been significant exploration of Thacker Pass since 2007. In February 2023, when the initial $320 million investment was completed, GM became Lithium Americas's largest shareholder and offtake partner. The mine is a project of Lithium Nevada, LLC, a wholly owned subsidiary of Lithium Americas Corp.
