Some medical practitioners have recommended greater regulation of pigments used in tattoo ink. The wide range of pigments currently used in tattoo inks may create unforeseen health problems. 3e2bd788c0 There are occasional reports dating back to the 1940s which suggest tattooing the sclera with small dots as part of experimental protocols seeking to determine how the human eye moves. There is, however, no documented history of sclera tattooing for medical or cosmetic purposes prior to the early 21st century. In around 2003, writer and artist Shannon Larratt photoshopped his eyes in a photo to look like the blue eyes of the Fremen in Frank Herbert's novel Dune. Inspired by his then-wife's eye implant surgery, he reached out to Howie "Luna Cobra" Rollins to devise a method to color his eyes permanently blue. Cobra agreed to attempt the procedure if Larratt could find two other volunteers. Larratt succeeded and carried out the process in 2007. As of March...
