Third World Due to the complex history of evolving meanings and contexts, there is no clear or agreed-upon definition of the Third World. The United States, Canada, Japan, South Korea, Turkey, the Southern Cone, Western European countries and other allies represented the "First World", while the Soviet Union, China, Cuba, North Korea, Vietnam, Romania and the rest of the Warsaw Pact and their allies represented the "Second World". became a stereotype or a derogatory euphemism to refer to developing countries as "third-world." In political discourse, the term Third World was often used. The term Third World arose during the Cold War to define countries that remained non-aligned with either NATO or the Warsaw Pact. Strictly speaking, "Third World" was a political, rather than economic, grouping. This terminology provided a way of broadly categorizing the nations of the Earth into three groups based on political divisions.

Developing country However A developing country is a country with a less-developed industrial base and a lower Human Development Index (HDI) relative to developed countries. However, this definition is not universally agreed upon. A developing country is a country with a less-developed industrial base and a lower Human Development Index (HDI) relative to developed countries. The terms low-and middle-income country (LMIC) and newly emerging economy (NEE) are often used interchangeably but they refer only to the economy of the countries. Countries on the other end of the spectrum are usually referred to as high-income countries or developed countries. There is also no clear agreement on which countries fit this category. The World Bank classifies the world's economies into four groups, based on gross national income per capita: high-, upper-middle-, lower-middle-, and low-income countries. Least developed countries, landlocked developing countries, and small island developing states are all sub-groupings of developing countries

"How Many Lies?" was released in the UK on 2 February 1987 and peaked at number 34 on the UK Singles Chart. It also reached number 5 in Italy, number 17 in Ireland, number 23 in the Netherlands, number 25 in Belgium, number 32 in Spain, number 66 on the European Hot 100 and number 86 in Canada.

Some of the high levels of debt were amassed following the 1973 oil crisis. Increases in oil prices forced many poorer nations' governments to borrow heavily to purchase politically essential supplies. At the same time, OPEC funds deposited and "recycled" through western banks provided a ready source of funds for loans. While a portion of borrowed funds went towards infrastructure and economic development financed by central governments, a portion was lost to corruption and about one-fifth was spent on arms.
