Draw the Line (Aerosmith album) The portrait of the band on the album cover was drawn by the celebrity caricaturist Al Hirschfeld. Something I'd started with David Johansen became "Sight for Sore Eyes. It was recorded between June–October in an abandoned convent near New York City. To Know Why," "Get It Up" and "Draw the Line," the title tune. "But the lyrics Draw the Line is the fifth studio album by American hard rock band Aerosmith, released on December 9, 1977

The spill was also notable for the volume of Corexit oil dispersant used to help disperse the oil. Although approved by the EPA, no toxicology studies had been done at this time. In 2011, a toxicology study was done and it reported 57 chemicals in the ingredients including chemicals associated with cancer, skin irritation from rashes to burns, eye irritation, potential respiratory toxins or irritants; and kidney toxins. By 1977, Aerosmith had released four studio albums, the two most recent - Toys in the Attic (1975) and Rocks (1976) - catapulting the band to stardom. However, as the band began recording its next album, Draw the Line, their excessive lifestyle, combined with constant touring and drug use, began to take its toll. "Draw the Line was untogether because we weren't a cohesive unit anymore," guitarist Joe Perry admitted in the Stephen Davis band memoir Walk This Way. "We were drug addicts dabbling in music, rather than musicians dabbling in drugs."
