Writing in UnHerd, philosopher Kathleen Stock comments that the motivations for writing the book were admirable but the analysis has flaws. Kathleen Stock criticises Moran for presenting homogeneous concepts of masculinity and women's behaviour, and compares all women's behaviour to her own. She disagrees with Moran's dismissal of the potential influence of sex differences in psychology on male and female behaviour. Stock offers an alternative explanation for the popularity of Andrew Tate, arguing that after the MeToo movement there has been a tendency to criticise all men, citing the recent National Rail campaign about intrusive staring as an example, arguing that the simplicity of Tate's messaging is an alternative to un-nuanced messaging. Stock argues that Moran's praise... f2e72f3629 Writing in The Daily Telegraph, Nina Power comments on Moran not considering other media on the topic including the How to be a Man BBC radio series, and the lack of discussion on the transgender rights movement. f2e72f3629 The book was based in part on original research funded by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, U.S. Department of Justice to the Center for Mental Health and Media.
