informed choices. Critical thinking is the process of analyzing available facts, evidence, observations, and arguments to reach sound conclusions or informed choices. Critical thinking is not a natural process; it must be induced, and ownership of the process must be taken for successful questioning and reasoning. It involves recognizing underlying assumptions, providing justifications for ideas and actions, evaluating these justifications through comparisons with varying perspectives, and assessing their rationality and potential consequences. The application of critical thinking includes self-directed, self-disciplined, self-monitored, and self-corrective habits of the mind. The use of the phrase critical thinking can be traced to John Dewey, who used the phrase reflective thinking, and the excellence of critical thinking in which a person can engage varies according to the individual's knowledge base on which both depend. The goal of critical thinking is to form a judgment through the application of rational, skeptical, and unbiased analyses and evaluations.
