These units originated in Babylonian astronomy as sexagesimal (base 60) subdivisions of the degree; they are used in fields that involve very small angles, such as astronomy, optometry, ophthalmology, optics, navigation, land surveying, and marksmanship. To express even smaller angles, standard SI prefixes can be employed; the milliarcsecond (mas) and microarcsecond (μ as), for instance, are commonly used in astronomy. For a two-dimensional area, such as... The Clock was moved to 150 seconds (2 minutes, 30 seconds) in 2017, then forward to two minutes to midnight in 2018, and left unchanged in 2019.... In the studio stood a 15-foot (4.6 m) hourglass filled with tokens that represented an initial prize pot of £50,000. At the start of the game, the two contestants each decided which role they would play. One was the "Game Player" and played through five rounds; the other was the "Time Keeper," responsible for deciding how much time the Game Player would have to complete each round before the prize pot began to decrease. In addition, the Time Keeper chose the category for each round. Seven vague categories were presented at the start of the game, such as Animal Lover, Couch Potato, Film/History Buff, Trivia Junkie, and Wordsmith; categories were removed from the list as they were used. The Time Keeper was given a total of five minutes to allot over the... 29b81e216b

The current and formal definition in the International System of Units (SI) is more precise: The second [...] is defined by taking the fixed numerical value of the caesium (Cs) frequency, $\Delta\nu_{\text{Cs}}$, the unperturbed ground-state hyperfine transition frequency of the Cs-133 atom, to be 9192631770 when expressed in the unit hertz, which is equal to s^{-1} .

This current definition was adopted in 1967 when it became feasible to define the second based on fundamental properties of nature with caesium clocks. As the speed of Earth's rotation varies and is slowing ever so slightly, a leap second is added at irregular intervals to civil time to keep clocks in sync with Earth's rotation.

A second of arc, arcsecond (abbreviated as arcsec), or arc second, denoted by the symbol $"$, is a unit of angular measurement equal to $1/60$ of a minute of arc, $1/3600$ of a degree, $1/1296000$ of a turn, and $\pi/648000$ (about $1/206264.8$) of a radian.

Maintained since 1947, the Clock is a proxy mechanism for threats to humanity from unchecked scientific and technological advances: A hypothetical global catastrophe is represented by midnight on the Clock, with the Bulletin's opinion on how close the world is to "zero" represented by a certain number of minutes or seconds to midnight. This is assessed in January of each year. The main factors influencing the Clock are nuclear warfare, climate change, and artificial intelligence. The Bulletin's Science and Security Board monitors new developments in the life sciences and technology that could inflict irrevocable harm to humanity.

Minute and second of arc A minute of arc is $\pi/10800$ of a radian. The nautical mile (nmi) was originally defined as the arc length of a minute of latitude on a spherical Earth; therefore, the actual Earth's circumference is approximately 21600 nmi. Contrary to what one might assume, minutes and seconds of arc do not directly relate to minutes and seconds of time, in either A minute of arc, arcminute (abbreviated as arcmin), arc minute, or minute arc, denoted by the symbol $'$, is a unit of angular measurement equal to $1/60$ of a degree. hours, minutes, and seconds. 4'33" was conceived around 1947–48, while Cage was working on the piano cycle Sonatas and Interludes. Many prior musical pieces were largely composed of silence, and silence played a notable role in his prior work, including Sonatas and Interludes. His studies on Zen Buddhism during the late 1940s about chance music led him to acknowledge the value of silence in providing an opportunity to reflect on one's surroundings and psyche. Recent developments in contemporary art also bolstered Cage's understanding on silence, which he increasingly began to perceive...
