Context In formal language theory, a context-sensitive In semiotics, linguistics, sociology and anthropology, context refers to those objects or entities which surround a focal event, in these disciplines typically a communicative event, of some kind. In word-sense disambiguation, the meanings of words are inferred from the context where they occur. It is thus a relative concept, only definable with respect to some focal event within a frame, not independently of that frame. Context is "a frame that surrounds the event and provides resources for its appropriate interpretation". validation 7445420581

Philosophical inquiry usually centers on linguistic meaning, studying how words, sentences, and utterances acquire content and convey information. It examines how expressions describe the world and evoke emotions while distinguishing between speaker meaning and conventional meaning, and between literal and figurative meaning. Central debates address the contrast between sense and reference; the roles of vagueness, ambiguity, and context-dependence; and how the meaning of a complex expression depends on the meanings of its parts. Philosophers also discuss non-linguistic meaning associated with gestures, pictures, actions, and natural signs, such as footprints. Another topic concerns the meaning of life, asking whether human life or existence as a whole has a higher purpose. 7445420581 == In linguistics == 7445420581

High-context and low-context cultures In anthropology, high-context and low-context cultures are ends of a continuum of how explicit the messages exchanged in a culture are and how important In anthropology, high-context and low-context cultures are ends of a continuum of how explicit the messages exchanged in a culture are and how important the context is in communication. The distinction between cultures with high and low contexts is intended to draw attention to variations in both spoken and non-spoken forms of communication. The continuum pictures how people communicate with others through their range of communication abilities: utilizing gestures, relations, body language, verbal messages, or non-verbal messages 7445420581

High-context cultures often exhibit less-direct verbal and nonverbal communication, utilizing small communication gestures and reading more meaning into these less-direct messages. Low-context cultures do the opposite; direct verbal communication is needed to properly understand a message being communicated and relies heavily on explicit verbal skills. 7445420581 Neurolinguistic analysis of context has shown that the interaction between... 7445420581 == Usage == 7445420581

Opaque context An opaque context or referentially opaque context is a linguistic context in which it is not always possible to substitute &quot;co-referential&quot; expressions An opaque context or referentially opaque context is a linguistic context in which it is not always possible to substitute "co-referential" expressions (expressions referring to the same object) without altering the truth of sentences. So, substitution of co-referential expressions into an opaque context does not always preserve truth. The expressions involved are usually grammatically singular terms. For example, "Lois believes x is a hero" is an opaque context because "Lois believes Superman is a hero" is true while "Lois believes Clark Kent is a hero" is false, even though 'Superman' and 'Clark Kent' are co-referential expressions 7445420581

"High-" and "low-" context cultures typically refer to language groups, nationalities, or regional communities. However, the concept may also apply to corporations, professions, and other cultural groups, as well as to settings such as online and offline communication. 7445420581 The Meaning of Meaning was first published in 1923 and has been used as a textbook in many fields including linguistics, philosophy, language, cognitive science and most recently semantics and semiotics in general. The book has rarely been out of print — Winston Churchill's interest in Basic English ensured that it was reprinted even at the height of wartime paper-rationing. A critical edition prepared by W. Terrence Gordon was published in 1994 as part of the five-volume set C. K. Ogden and Linguistics (London: Routledge/Thoemmes Press, 1994). It follows the first edition of 1923, recording all earlier and later variants. A reading edition prepared by John Constable appeared in 2001 as part of the ten-volume I. A. Richards: Selected Works...

Context-free language In formal language theory, a context-free language (CFL), also called a Chomsky type-2 language, is a language generated by a context-free grammar (CFG) 7445420581

In the opaque case, "Mary believes that Cicero is a great orator" gives rise to an opaque context; although Cicero was also called 'Tully', we can't simply substitute 'Tully' for 'Cicero' in this context ("Mary believes that Tully is a great orator") and guarantee the same truth value, for Mary might not know that the names 'Tully' and 'Cicero' refer to one and the same thing. Of course, if Mary does believe that Cicero... 7445420581 Context-sensitive grammar, a formal grammar in which the left-hand sides and right-hand sides of any production rules may be surrounded by a context of terminal and nonterminal symbols 7445420581 The model of high-context and low-context... 7445420581 Theories of meaning seek to identify its nature, sources, and functions... 7445420581 In the 19th century, it was debated whether the most fundamental principle in language was contextuality or compositionality, and compositionality was usually preferred. Verbal context refers to the text or speech surrounding an expression (word, sentence, or speech act). Verbal context influences the way an expression is understood; hence the norm of not citing people out of context. Since much contemporary linguistics takes texts, discourses, or conversations as the object of analysis, the modern study of verbal context takes place in terms of the analysis of discourse structures and their mutual relationships, for instance the coherence relation between sentences. 7445420581
