

Owasp Zed Attack Proxy Project

ZAP was originally forked from Paros which was developed by Chinotec Technologies Company. Simon Bennetts, the project lead, stated in 2014 that only 20% of ZAP's source code was still from Paros. WebScarab is meant to act as a framework, being extensible and with most features being implemented as plugins. WebScarab is an open source tool developed by The Open Web Application Security Project (OWASP), and was implemented in Java so it could run across multiple operating systems.

Core Infrastructure Initiative Infrastructure Initiative (CII) was a project of the Linux Foundation to fund and support free and open-source software projects that are critical to the functioning of the Internet and other major information systems. The project was announced on 24 April 2014 in the wake of Heartbleed, a critical security bug in OpenSSL that is used on millions of websites.

ZAP (software) When used as a proxy server it allows the user to manipulate all of the traffic that passes through it, including HTTPS encrypted traffic. ZAP (Zed Attack Proxy) is a dynamic application security testing tool published under the Apache License. It can also run in a daemon mode, which is then controlled via a REST-based API. When used as a proxy server it allows the user ZAP (Zed Attack Proxy) is a dynamic application security testing tool published under the Apache License.

In 2013 official development of WebScarab slowed. The project repository was archived on 4 April 2024. The website of the project was also archived and recommends using OWASP's Zed Attack Proxy instead. History ZAP was listed in the 2015 InfoWorld Bossie award for "The best open source networking and security software". OpenSSL is among the first software projects to be funded by the initiative after it was deemed underfunded, receiving only about $2,000 per year in donations. The initiative will sponsor two full-time OpenSSL core developers. In September 2014, the Initiative offered assistance to Chet Ramey, the maintainer of bash, after the Shellshock vulnerability was discovered.

WebScarab is a web security application testing tool. It serves as a proxy that intercepts and allows people to alter web browser web requests (both HTTP and HTTPS) and web server replies. The project repository was archived on 4 April 2024.

The first release was announced on Bugtraq in September 2010, and became an OWASP project a few months later. In 2023, ZAP developers moved to the Linux Foundation, where they became a part of the Software Security Project. As of September 24, 2024, all of the main developers joined Checkmarx as employees, and ZAP was rebranded as ZAP by Checkmarx.
